Did you know that many of the medications that we use in pediatrics in Canada are modified forms of adult formulations (called compounding)? Did you know that in many cases these pediatric formulations are available in other countries in a child-friendly form? In this presentation, we will explain why it is critical for Canadian children to have access to appropriately formulated medications and we will describe some of the reasons why certain pediatric medicines are not commercialized in Canada. Potential solutions will be offered to improve access to pediatric medications in Canada.
